

CHRISTMAS PARTY FUN OR FOLLY

A Christmas party for your staff,
a time to make merry and have a laugh.
But beware employers everywhere
as the responsibility for employees you will bear.

So employers, what can you do
to prevent the liability falling on you?
Don't be caught out by the unacceptable deeds
of your ever-so slightly inebriated employees.

Remind your staff before the big night
of the level of behavior regarded as right.
The policies that apply while they are at work,
apply the same way at the party perk

And if you're supplying copious wine
make sure you provide food at the same time.
Then don't forget the end of the night
you should ensure they all get home all right.

A designated driver remaining alcohol free,
an organized coach or a black taxi.
However you do it get them all home
don't leave them wondering out alone.

And when the wine has flowed away,
remind them to turn up for work the next day.
Bright and breezy and ready for work
to add to the coffers for the next company perk.

Make sure your party is fun not folly.
Deck your halls with boughs of holly.
We hope your holiday is full of good cheer and wish you all peace at Christmas and a fantastic new year.

www.hr101.co.uk

